Wednesday, January 10, 2018

NBA TV will feature a pair of live game telecasts on Martin Luther King Jr. Day, starting with Kemba Walker and the Charlotte Hornets visiting Andre Drummond and the Detroit Pistons, on Monday, January 15, at 12:30 p.m. ET. The network's coverage will continue with Dennis Schroder and the Atlanta Hawks hosting LaMarcus Aldridge and the San Antonio Spurs at 3 p.m.

The network's pregame coverage will begin at noon and include a special sit-down interview with Dr. Bernice A. King and Ambassador Attallah Shabazz, the daughters of civil rights pioneers Martin Luther King, Jr. and Malcolm X, conducted by Isiah Thomas.

NBA TV's final Players Only of the season will feature Anthony Davis and the New Orleans Pelicans visiting Kyrie Irving and the Boston Celtics on Tuesday, January 16, at 7:30 p.m. The night's action will conclude with C.J. McCollum and the Portland Trail Blazers hosting the Phoenix Suns and Devin Booker at 10 p.m. The network's signature "Game of the Week" will transition to a Fast Break Mondays Presented by Verizon series beginning on Monday, Jan. 22. Additional details on the all-new series will be announced at a later date.

NBA TV will televise Jayson Tatum and the Boston Celtics vs. Ben Simmons and the Philadelphia 76ers on Thursday, Jan. 11, at 3 p.m., from The O2 Arena in London. Tas Melas will report from London across the network's programming, including The Starters and NBA GameTime, in association with the game.
